

PROGRAMME SPECIFICATION

This document describes the Joint Honours Degree programme in Geography and Politics and International Relations. This specification is valid for new entrants from September 2015.

The principal aim of all programmes is to allow students to pursue the study of International Relations alongside that of Politics and Geography. For Joint Honours students this includes relating politics at the domestic level with that at the international level and vice versa. In meeting this principal aim the programmes also:

- Provides a systematic understanding and knowledge of political theory and institutions in both a domestic and international context.
- Encourages critical awareness of current political problems at national and international levels.
- Provides theoretical insights and methodological techniques relevant to the development and interpretation of knowledge in Politics and International Relations and to the evaluation of current research and scholarship in the field.
- Fosters an independent learning ability for continued intellectual development.

Programmes are normally delivered in three stages, each of which comprises one year of full-time study during which the student must follow courses to the value of four units (one unit is roughly equivalent to 30 national credits). The programme comprises 'core' disciplinary courses and 'optional' specialist courses, with an extended essay in the final stage. Whilst the development of disciplinary-specific skills are emphasised in the 'core' courses, the specialist options provide focused opportunities to examine the application of these skills. Moreover, the multi-disciplinary common first year, and the opportunity to take courses offered in complementary disciplines, gives a heightened appreciation of disciplinary distinctiveness. .

Further information

Learning outcomes

Teaching, learning and assessment

Details of the programme structure\(s\)

Progression and award requirements

Student support and guidance

Admission requirements

Further learning and career opportunities

Indicators of quality and standards

List of programmes, with details of awards, degree titles, accreditation and teaching arrangements

This document provides a summary of the main features of the programme(s), and of the outcomes which a student might reasonably be expected to achieve if full advantage is taken of the learning opportunities provided. Further information is contained in the College prospectus, the College Regulations and in various handbooks issued to students upon arrival. Whilst Royal Holloway keeps all its information for prospective applicants and students under review, programmes and the availability of individual courses are necessarily subject to change at any time, and prospective applicants are therefore advised to seek confirmation of any factors which might affect their decision to follow a specific programme. In turn, Royal Holloway will inform applicants and students as soon as is practicable of any substantial changes which might affect their studies.

Learning outcomes

Teaching and learning on the programmes are closely informed by the active research of staff. In general terms, the programmes provide opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate the following learning outcomes:

Knowledge and understanding

The programmes are designed to enable students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the following aspects of the discipline:

- Extensive knowledge and critical understanding of recent and current developments in the field of political science and international relations, and of the issues and controversies associated with these developments.
- A sound basic understanding of social science and international relations methodology.
- A critical understanding of result and data relating to the field of political science.
- Familiarity with a broad selection of the principal classic and contemporary texts in the fields of politics and international relations.
- A sound knowledge of the theories, techniques and concepts used to further our understanding of the issues, processes and phenomena associated with the field of politics and international relations.
- A sound understanding of the principal approaches and current issues in a range of options taught during the second and third years of the programme.

Skills and other attributes

The programme fosters the development of a range of personal skills and attributes that will strengthen a student's abilities to engage in continuing professional development, engage in further academic research and contribute to the wider academic community. It is also designed to allow students to acquire competence in the following range of discipline-specific and transferable (denoted with an asterisk*) skills:

- Assess the merits of theories, models and explanations in political science, and situate them in a wider disciplinary context.
- Apply the concepts and methods used in political science and international relations to the analysis of political theories and institutions within the international system.
- Analyse qualitative and quantitative data relating to the field of politics and international relations.
- Evaluate current research and scholarship in the field, and evaluate and, where appropriate, develop critiques of the methodologies employed by political scientists.
- Gather, organise and deploy evidence, data and information from a variety of sources, and assess their nature and value.
- Carry out an independent investigation of a political topic or issue and produce a coherent written account.
- Communicate complex ideas and present arguments and complex information in a clear and concise manner in writing.*
- Analyse and interpret complex issues, and develop reasoned arguments and make sound, critical judgements in the absence of complete data.*
- Use literature, internet and database searches to gain necessary information.*
- Develop the intellectual autonomy and self-direction needed for independent investigation of intellectual problems, taking responsibility for one's learning, and developing habits of reflection on that learning.*
- Exercise of initiative and personal responsibility.*
- Ability to take decisions in complex and uncertain situations.*
- The ability to work autonomously and collaboratively with others.*
- Self-awareness and self-management of research.*
- Awareness of one's responsibility as a local, national and international citizen.*
- Ability to learn independently and to take advantage of life-learning.*
- Skills of oral presentation.*

* transferable skills

Back to top

Teaching, learning and assessment

Teaching and learning on the programmes draw on the methods and concepts used to investigate political phenomena at both national and international levels. It is also strongly informed by the current research interests of the core teaching team within the Department. The main methods used to develop knowledge and understanding are formal lectures by academic staff within the Department, tutorials and seminar discussions based on a combination of staff led sessions and student presentations.

Assessment will be by a combination of assessed coursework and examination, as indicated in individual course specifications. The aim through the programme is to use a variety of different assessments (essays, examinations, other set coursework, presentations) to gauge the performance of students in as comprehensive a way as possible. For students studying Politics and International Relations, the assessment process culminates in guided independent research/study with the production of an extended essay, which is a compulsory course in the final year. Throughout the duration of the programme the required word lengths for coursework are gradually increased. This allows for student development and for their increased ability to articulate their knowledge, understanding of text and their arguments at a more advanced level.

Full details of the assessments for individual courses can be obtained from the Department of Politics and International Relations, and, in the case of the Geography, Politics and International Relations degree, also the Department of Geography.

Back to top

Details of the programme structure(s)

The programmes are designed to be completed in three stages, each stage comprising 1 year of fulltime study. Students are to complete a total of twelve full course units. In the Stage one all courses are compulsory. In stages two and three students choose from the available course options. The only stipulations are that options must be chosen in equal measure from both 'sides' (Politics and International Relations) of the programme and all students must complete PR3000 (Extended Essay) during their final year..

Please note that not all courses run each year. A full list of courses including optional courses for the current academic year can be obtained from the Department of Politics and International Relations, and, in the case of the Geography, Politics and International Relations degree, the Department of Geography.

Joint Honours Degree in Geography, Politics and International Relations

Stage One

Students must take:

PR1400 Introduction to Politics and Government (1 unit) [Non-condonable fail – must be passed in order to progress to the next stage]

PR1500 Introduction to International Relations (1 unit) [Non-condonable fail – must be passed in order to progress to the next stage]

PR1400 and PR1500 must be passed in order to progress to the next stage.

Plus specified courses in the Geography Department's Programme Specification.

Stage Two

Students must take at least one, but no more than two units of courses offered in Politics and International Relations.

Plus specified courses in the Geography Department's Programme Specification, with students taking a total of four units for the year.

Stage Three

Students must take PR3000 Dissertation in Politics and/or International Relations (1 unit) if they do not select GG3001 Dissertation in Geography.

Students must take at least one, but no more than two units of courses offered in Politics and International Relations.

Plus specified courses in the Geography Department's Programme Specification, with students taking a total of four units for the year

Back to top

Progression and award requirements

The progression and award requirements are essentially the same across all Honours Degree programmes at Royal Holloway as outlined in the College's Undergraduate Regulations. Students must pass units to the value of at least three units on each stage of the programme. Failing marks of 30 – 39% can normally be condoned in up to 30 credits across stages 1 and 2. In the final stage failing marks in up to 30 credits can normally be condoned. However, on some programmes there may be a requirement to pass specific courses in order to progress to the next stage or to qualify for a particular degree title and this will put restrictions on courses in which failing marks can be condoned (see programme structure above for details). Additionally there are requirements on the number of courses that must be passed in order to qualify for particular joint or combined Honours degrees.

Students are considered for the award and classified on the basis of a weighted average. This is calculated from marks gained in courses taken in stages two and three, and gives twice the weighting to marks gained in stage three. The College's Undergraduate Regulations include full details on progression and award requirements for all undergraduate programmes offered by the College.

All first year students on single joint or combined honours programmes offered all or in part by departments or schools in the Faculty of Arts & Social Science are required to pass a Moodle-based writing skills quiz in order to progress into the second year of study. The pass mark for the test is 60%. Certificates of Distinction are awarded to students who achieve at least 80% in the quiz. Students may attempt the quiz as often as they wish with no penalties or capping. Students who meet the requirements for progression as stipulated in the College's Undergraduate Regulations (Section: Conditions for progression to the next stage) but fail to pass the Moodle-based quiz will not be permitted to progress into their second year of academic study at the College.

Back to top

Student support and guidance

- Personal Advisers: All students are allocated a personal adviser who meets with them in the induction week and then regularly through the programme. The tutor's role is to advise on academic, pastoral and welfare issues.
- All tutors and academic staff, including the Head of Department, are available for consultation at advertised office hours.
- The Departmental Academic Coordinator provides guidance and advice on a range of academic, administrative, pastoral and welfare matters.
- The Department operates an 'open door' policy such that any member of staff may be consulted by students.
- A Departmental common room and a study room are available to all students.
- Induction programme to the Department and College for orientation at the start of the first year.
- Detailed and comprehensive Departmental Student Handbook.
- The Departmental Staff/Student Committee acts as a channel of communication between staff and students.

For students registered in or after September 2015

Version 2.0

Dated: 08/08/2015

- Extensive supporting material and learning resources available from the College libraries. In addition students also have access to a wide range of resources available through other University of London libraries.
- College Careers and Employability Service and Departmental Careers and Employability Tutor.
- Access to all College and University support services, including Student Counselling Service, Health Centre and the Disability and Dyslexia Services for students with disabilities and Specific Learning Difficulties.

Back to top

Admission requirements

Details of the Department's typical offer for each programme of study is available on the Course Finder web page. However, the Department also has flexibility in its admissions and offers policy and strongly encourages applications from non-standard applicants. Students whose first language is not English may also be asked for a qualification in English Language at an appropriate level. For further guidance it may be helpful to contact the Recruitment and Partnerships Office.

Back to top

Further learning and career opportunities

The programmes provide a firm foundation for postgraduate study and research, and some of the more successful graduates can expect to go on to postgraduate programmes in both Royal Holloway and elsewhere. The programmes also provide graduates with a range of intellectual, personal and social skills that are transferable to a wide variety of employment opportunities. Careers which will especially suit International Relations graduates include work in the civil service, local government, public and private sector management, political research and lobbying, teaching, and journalism and the media. Students on the programmes are able to take full advantage of the resources available at the College Careers & Employability Service.

Back to top

Indicators of quality and standards

Royal Holloway's position as one of the UK's leading research-intensive institutions was confirmed by the results of the most recent Research Excellence Framework (REF 2014) conducted by the Higher Education Funding Council (HEFCE). The scoring system for the REF 2014 measures research quality in four categories, with the top score of 4* indicating quality that is world-leading and of the highest standards in terms of originality, significance and rigour and 3* indicating research that is internationally excellent. 81% of the College's research profile was deemed to be within the 4* or 3* categories, an increase of over 20% since 2008. This result placed Royal Holloway 31st overall in the UK for 4* and 3* research and 33rd based on an overall Grade Point Average (GPA) score.

The Department of Politics and International Relations is ranked 37th in the UK for research of 4* standard and 18th for 3* and 4* research.

Back to top

List of programmes

All the programmes are taught entirely by staff at Royal Holloway, University of London, and lead to awards of the University of London. Programmes in Politics and International Relations are not subject to accreditation by a professional body. The QAA subject benchmark statements in Politics and International Relations describe the general features which one might expect from Honours Degree programmes in these subjects, and can therefore be used as a point of reference when reading this document (see www.qaa.ac.uk). UCAS codes are given in parentheses (see www.ucas.ac.uk).

Joint Honours Degree programmes in Politics and International Relations taught with Geography Department

BSc Geography, Politics and International Relations (FL82)

Back to top